

NHR 2.0 | Tax Incentive for Scientific Research and Innovation (IFICI)

General considerations of the regime

CONDITIONS

The regime applies to individuals who:

- Are considered tax residents in Portugal;
- Earn income in Portugal derived from the IFICI activities (detailed below), as an employee or self-employee;
- Have not qualified as tax residents in Portugal in any of the previous five years;
- Have not benefited from, or are not benefiting from, the non-habitual tax residents' regime (NHR) or the regime applicable to former residents.

BENEFITS

- Special flat tax rate of 20% applicable to the net income derived from carrying out the activities covered in Portugal (employed or self-employed);
- Exemption of all income obtained abroad, except pension income.

DURATION

- The regime is applicable for 10 years;
- The right to the benefit each year depends on the taxpayer being considered a tax resident in Portugal and continuing to earn income from the exercise of one of the IFICI activities;
- If the IFICI activity ends, the taxpayer should start a new IFICI activity within a period of six months;
- The taxpayer who has not benefited from the regime in one or more years can resume enjoying it;
- When the registration is performed after the deadline, the regime will take effect from the year the registration is done.
